Experts have concluded that Mississippi's Public Employees Retirement System needs an additional $75 million a year in funding to cover future employee pensions. The state can cover these costs, or the system can be changed so that benefits for new hires are significantly less than those retirees and current state employees. Which option do you prefer?

The Mississippi Attorney General's office recently announced a lawsuit against three of the nation's largest opioid manufacturers for violating consumer protection laws. If successful, the suit would reduce the number of opioids coming into the state and being sold illegally while requiring opioid manufacturers to reimburse Mississippi for costs associated with combating addiction. Do you support or oppose this lawsuit against opioid manufacturers?

Experts have concluded that Mississippi's Public Employees Retirement System needs an additional $75 million a year in funding to cover future employee pensions. The state can cover these costs, or the system can be changed so that benefits for new hires are significantly less than those retirees and current state employees. Which option do you prefer?
